PATHWAYS TO HISTORY

Footpaths, Tracks and Roads in Norfolk

Discover the archaeology and landscape history of public rights of way in Norfolk with Dr SARAH SPOONER

Is it possible to 'date' roads and paths by looking at their archaeology?

By studying historic routes and maps we can add to our understanding of local landscapes and communities, think about how we can reconstruct lost routes and discover why there are so many 'gaps' on the map of public rights of way in Norfolk.

After listening to this talk, you will never look at footpaths, tracks and roads the same way again
